Chapel Hill, NC - The American Board of Pediatrics (ABP) is pleased to announce that Lilia Fernandez Coppa, MD, has passed the board's General Pediatrics Certifying Examination and is now a Board Certified Pediatrician. To be eligible to take the exam, a person must have graduated from medical school and satisfactorily completed three years of training in an accredited pediatric residency program.

Board certification signifies that pediatricians have gone above and beyond the licensing requirements to practice medicine. Once they have passed the initial certification exam, pediatricians enroll in the ABP's Maintenance of Certification activities, which demonstrate their commitment to keep abreast of the latest advances in pediatric medicine and to measure and improve the quality of their practice.

How will you find the right doctor for your child?

When it comes to our children, nothing is more important than their health and well-being. But if you're expecting a baby, moving to a new community or simply looking for a new pediatrician, how will you find the right doctor for your child?

You can talk to your friends, ask your insurance company, read online reviews or call a children's hospital for a recommendation. But how can you ensure that your child will get the highest level of care?

If you choose a doctor who is certified by the American Board of Pediatrics, you know that person is continuously demonstrating the skills and knowledge needed to care for children and adolescents.

Pediatricians who are board certified have committed to a continuous process of learning and testing that goes beyond requirements for a state medical license. Certification ensures that they are keeping up with the latest advances in medical science as well as "best practices" in patient safety and quality care.

If you want to be sure your doctor can provide the care your child deserves, then look for one certified by the American Board of Pediatrics. To find out if your pediatrician is board certified, visit www.abp.org.
